DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. The specification has not been checked to the extent necessary to determine the presence of all possible minor errors. Applicant's cooperation is requested in correcting any errors of which applicant may become aware in the specification.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1-3, 6, 7, 10-32, 34, 37, and 38 are rejected under 35 USC 102(b) as being anticipated by Goldhaber et al. (patent number 5,794,210, hereinafter referred to as "Goldhaber").

Goldhaber teaches all the limitations of Claims 1-3, 6, 7, 10-32, 34, 37, and 38. For example, Goldhaber discloses a method of advertisers gaining the attention of consumers accessing the Internet via attention brokerage and compensating consumers who pay attention to the advertisement (please see at least title, abstract; col. 4, lines 34-35; col. 9, lines 34-36). Goldhaber discloses advertisers as sponsors embedding advertisements with content most likely to reach the advertiser's target audience referred to as linking sponsorship (see at least col. 2, lines 24-27). Goldhaber discloses decoupling advertising from the content referred to as orthogonal sponsorship (see at least col. 5, lines 46-47). Goldhaber further discloses:

- Providing a product at a networking site; product covered by intellectual property:
(see at least abstract; Fig. 1 (102); col. 1, lines 4-8; col. 3, lines 51-55; col. 5, lines 11-13; col. 6, lines 3-7; col. 9, lines 32-41).
- Restricting access to product: restricts access to valuable information until information provider receives compensation (e.g. television program, prerecorded music, magazine or newspaper article, research report)
- Facilitating the display of a sponsor message to a consumer: (see at least abstract; col. 9, lines 62-67).
- Allowing access to a product after facilitating display; purchasing product: seeing an ad and requesting the film clip; making a purchase (see at least Fig. 13 (314); col. 5, lines 11-13; col. 18, lines 53-55).
- Maintaining a consumer activity log: creates consumer profile; maintains profile, updates profile (see at least col. 13, line 33 through col. 14, lines 56).
- Authoring sponsor message: advertiser creates ad at site (see at least Fig. 8 (68, 106); col. 14, lines 17-20).
- Consumer sign-up: providing personal data, contact data, profile data, taking acceptance action, password (see at least col. 12, line 45 through col. 13, line 40).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 4, 5, 8, 35, and 36 are rejected under 35 USC 103(a) as being unpatentable over Goldhaber (patent number 5,794,210), in view Wiser et al. (patent number 6,385,596 hereinafter referred to as "Wiser").

Goldhaber teaches all the above as noted under the 102(b) rejection and teaches a) advertising intellectual property products, b) compensating information providers for purchased content (e.g. prerecorded music, television programs, search reports), and c) trading houses providing automatic royalty tracking (see at least col. 19, line 19 through col. 20, line 53; col. 20, lines 54-55), but does not disclose making royalty payments. Wiser teaches protecting a content owner's intellectual property rights over a network, and further teaches tracking and making royalty payments to a content owners and facilitators (see at least col. 9, lines 39-53; col. 11, lines 49-61). Therefore it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at time of the invention to modify the method of Goldhaber to disclose making royalty payments as taught by Wiser, in order to disclose the purpose of royalty tracking, and thereby attract content owners and facilitators to the service desiring to be paid royalties.

Goldhaber teaches all the above as noted under the 103(a) rejection, but does not disclose entering into a license agreement with the owner of the intellectual property.

Wiser teaches all the above as noted under the 103(a) rejection and further teaches consumers and facilitators entering into a license agreement with the owner of intellectual property (see at least abstract; Fig. 1A (108, 116); Fig. 1B (110); col. 1, lines 45-47; col. 5, lines 56; col. 10, lines 18-48). Therefore it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at time of the invention to modify the method of Goldhaber to implement licensing as taught by Wiser, in order to protect the intellectual property rights of the product owner.

4. Claims 9 and 39 are rejected under 35 USC 103(a) as being unpatentable over Goldhaber (patent number 5,794,210).

Goldhaber teaches all the above as noted under the 102(b) rejection and further teaches inactivating a CyberCoin to prevent a consumer from receiving additional compensation by merely accessing the same advertisement (see at least col. 17, lines 49-52), but does not disclose barring the owner of intellectual property from pretending to be a consumer. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at time of the invention to disclose barring the content provider from pretending to be a consumer, since it is well within the skill to ascertain that content providers are capable of abusing the system as well as consumers.

5. Claims 33 are rejected under 35 USC 103(a) as being unpatentable over Goldhaber (patent number 5,794,210).

Goldhaber teaches all the above as noted under the 102(b) rejection and teaches advertisers directly compensating a consumer via payment for viewing and paying attention to an advertisement, and further teaches a consumer using the payment to compensate the information provider via another payment for providing entertainment or other information the consumer wishes to access (see at least col. 12, lines 5-11).

Goldhaber, however, does not teach the consumer viewing a sponsor message as an alternative to direct payment for the selected product. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at time of the invention to disclose the consumer viewing a sponsor message as an alternative, since it is well within the skill to ascertain the sponsor could have paid the entertainment content provider directly for the content the consumer desired.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure:

- Ebenkamp, Becky; "Gold on that thar Web," Brandweek, 15 July 1996, v37n29pg17, 3pgs, Proquest #9892249; teaches CyberGold's attention brokerage system.
